China's growing role as infrastructure financier for Sub-Saharan Africa

Abstract. China and Africa have a long history of political and economic ties, which have greatly intensified in recent years. Both bilateral and multilateral trade and financial agreements have been signed, with China providing significant investments in infrastructure projects. This has led to a situation where China is now the largest investor in Africa's infrastructure sector. In recent years, a number of emerging economies have begun to play a more prominent role in financing infrastructure projects in Sub-Saharan Africa, with China's growing role as infrastructure financier for the region.
