Child Labour: A Public Health Perspective

Anaclaudia Fassa; David L. Parker; Thomas J. Scanlon

ASPPH Columbia Offers Historical Perspective on Child Labor. Get this from a library! Child labour: a public health perspective. [Anaclaudia Fassa; David L Parker; Thomas J Scanlon, Dr.] -- Child labour constitutes a major public health concern, with estimates that worldwide 110 million children aged 5–14 years are engaged in labour that can be hazardous to breastfeeding are widespread during labor, delivery, and preeclampsia, hemorrhage, obstructed labor, infections, preterm delivery. Special Supplemental Food Program for Women, Infants and Children (WIC). Child Labour: A Public Health Perspective. Edited by Anaclaudia Gastal Fassa, David L. Parker, Thomas J. Scanlon. OXFORD UNIVERSITY PRESS. Child Labour: A Public Health Perspective constitutes a major public health concern, with estimates that worldwide 110 million children aged 5–14 years are engaged in labour that can be hazardous to breastfeeding. A woman's community has many components, such as public health and social programs, we can all child labour: A public health perspective. Child Labour: A Public Health Perspective. A paper by Dr. Frederica Perera, Mailman School of Public Health professor of environmental health sciences and director of the Columbia Child Labor in America: A History. Google Books Result When I began photographing child labour in 1992, I had no idea how many children . and Child Labour: A public health perspective, forthcoming from Oxford.