Laso Schaller, a Brazilian-born, Swiss-raised daredevil, has set a new cliff-jumping world record after leaping from the 193-foot Cascata del Salto waterfall in Switzerland. Schaller leaped from to set a new world record in cliff jumping. The daring feat was featured in a YouTube video that went viral, attracting millions of views. Schaller's jump was recorded at 58.8 meters (192.9 feet), beating the previous record of 58.8 meters (192.9 feet) set by Dana Kunze in Switzerland. The impressive feat was witnessed by spectators and recorded by camera operators, who captured the moment of Schaller's leap into the water. The video has since been shared widely on social media, highlighting the thrill and athleticism of cliff jumping and the beauty of nature.