The journal publishes the very best research covering the field. The focus is on theoretical work, with a particular emphasis on the development of new ideas and paradigms. The journal is dedicated to promoting interdisciplinary research that bridges the gap between theory and practice in the field of planning. It is designed to provide a platform for scholars and practitioners to share their insights and findings on various aspects of urban development, policy-making, and social change.

Recent publications in the journal have explored a wide range of topics, including the role of planning in promoting social justice, the use of technology in urban planning, and the impact of globalization on urban development. The journal is known for its rigorous peer review process, ensuring the quality and relevance of the research it publishes. It is a valuable resource for anyone interested in the latest developments in the field of planning theory.