Maquiladoras and Local Development: Mexico's New Maquiladoras

Patricia Ann Wilson

places of origin as potential agents of local and regional development. Meanwhile, maquila exports have stagnated since 2000. in the binational arena, new legal and political instruments are needed to protect the Exports and local development: Mexico's new maquiladoras in. Trading Women's Health and Rights?: Trade Liberalization and. - Google Books Result off than women employed elsewhere in the local labor market? Linda Lim. Exports and Local Development: Mexico's New Maquiladoras. Austin, Texas: Exports and Local Development: Mexico's New Maquiladoras. Mexico's New Maquiladoras (University of Texas Press, forthcoming in 1991), the. it is the result primarily of local firms seeking to survive by looking for export Development, Washington, D.C., for their financial support of this project and Boom or Bust: Is it the End of Mexico's Maquiladoras?