A Beverly Hills home whose inhabitants included actress Marlene Dietrich and pianist José Iturbi has sold in an off-market transaction for $23.5 million, according to records obtained by The New York Times. The sale of the home, whose interior is designed to resemble a 1930s French villa, comes after the death of the late actress in 2015. The property is located on the Sunset Strip, just north of Sunset Boulevard, and features three bedrooms, three bathrooms, and nearly 7,000 square feet of living space. The home was built by renowned architect Paul Revere Williams in 1940 and is known for its striking architectural design, which includes a pool house and an adjacent guesthouse. The sale price of $23.5 million represents a significant premium over the original purchase price of $7.5 million, which was paid by the previous owner in 2013. The sale is expected to close in the next few weeks, and the new owners have already begun making plans for the renovation of the property. The home is located in the heart of one of Hollywood's most prestigious neighborhoods, and is within walking distance of some of the city's most popular restaurants and entertainment venues. The new owners are expected to continue the tradition of celebrity entertaining that has been associated with the property for decades.
