The difference between asylum seekers, refugees and economic migrants is a subject of ongoing debate in Europe. The terms "migrant" and "refugee" are sometimes used interchangeably, but there is a crucial legal distinction for European countries receiving new arrivals. Refugees, as defined by the United Nations, are people who have fled their country to escape war or persecution. Migrants, on the other hand, are people who are moving to another country for economic gain or other reasons. Asylum seekers are those who apply for asylum in a host country, hoping to secure refugee status.글이 끝나는 부분은 자습이 제한된 것으로 보입니다.
