Does the death row phenomenon violate a prisoner's human rights?

Convicted prisoners, in spite of their imprisonment, retain all civil rights which are protected by the European Convention on Human Rights. The Protocol No 1 of the European Convention on Human Rights, which was that 'a convicted prisoner who is in prison at the time of the bringing of the proceedings has a right to be heard, in writing, by the Court in such proceedings'.

The potential for prisoners to suffer from human rights abuses is a major concern. The International Centre for Prison Studies (ICPS) has carried out extensive research on human rights violations in prisons. The ICPS is based in London and is an independent research institute.

The ICPS has conducted numerous studies on human rights issues in prisons, including the impact of solitary confinement, the treatment of prisoners, and the management of human rights risks. The ICPS has also conducted research on the implementation of the European Convention on Human Rights and the European Court of Human Rights (ECtHR) in European prisons.
