To understand the municipal police in the Gulf states, one must consider the context in which they operate. The results of a survey of municipal police in the Gulf states indicate a need for reform. The country improved its poor human rights performance, freed scores of political prisoners, and introduced new laws. Masters' theses focus on Saudi Arabia, including a survey of human rights practices in the country.

The book "Shame in the House of Saud: Contempt for Human Rights in the Kingdom of Saudi Arabia" by the Minnesota Lawyers International Human Rights Committee provides a detailed analysis of the human rights situation in Saudi Arabia. This book highlights the conflict between tradition and modernity, and the challenges faced by the authorities in implementing human rights.

Additional references include:
- "Administrative Reform in Saudi Arabia" by Richard A. Chapman, which examines the efforts to improve the efficiency and effectiveness of the government.
- "The House of Saud: The Rise and Rule of the Most Powerful Dynasty in the Arab World" by Richard A. Chapman, which delves into the history and influence of the royal family.

These resources provide a comprehensive understanding of the human rights situation in Saudi Arabia and the efforts to improve it.
