Unpacking My Library: Writers And Their Books

Leah Price

Unpacking My Library: Writers And Their Books is a book edited by Leah Price. It presents photographs of the libraries of thirteen favorite novelists who share their collections with readers. The book was published by Yale University Press in 2011.

The book is a collection of essays and interviews that explore the personal libraries of thirteen prominent writers, including F. Scott Fitzgerald, Ernest Hemingway, and Virginia Woolf. Each writer is profiled in a chapter that delves into their reading habits, the books they own, and the role their libraries play in their lives.

Price's introduction sets the stage for the book, explaining the idea behind the project: to uncover the personal libraries of famous writers as a way to understand their work and lives. She writes, "I wanted to see where these books and the culture of books reside."

Each writer's library is depicted in stunning photographs, providing a glimpse into their world. Price's writing is engaging and enlightening, offering insights into the writers' minds and the role their libraries play in their creative processes.

The book is not only a showcase of literary treasures but also a celebration of the joy of reading. It is a must-read for anyone interested in literature, libraries, and the lives of writers.

Unpacking My Library: Writers And Their Books is a beautiful and insightful exploration of the personal libraries of some of the greatest writers of all time. It is a reminder of the power of reading and the influence it has on our lives.
